

The product shown above is an industrial control unit. It incorporates a power management system, a radio remote control receiver, a video interface and all the connectors to the rest of the system. A flash micro controller handles all communications to the PC and from the acquisition hardware.