The product shown above is a remote control interface to a sound pressure level meter. The board uses a small flash microcontroller to generate RS232 communications between the meter and the panel switches and the RF remote control.